

Implementing Cultural Competence and Cultural Humility in the HIV Workforce

This is a foundational course for HIV service providers to increase their knowledge of cultural competence and cultural humility as interdependent concepts, as well as their skills to apply these in their day-to-day interactions with clients. Learners will be exposed to other related foundational concepts and will have opportunities for practice and discussion.

Implementing Cultural Competence and Cultural Humility in the HIV Workforce

Course Objectives

By the end of this training, participants will be able to do the following:

- Recognize key definitions related to Cultural Competency and Cultural Humility.
- Explain how client-provider power imbalances may affect providers' engagement with clients.
- Demonstrate two effective communication strategies to use with clients during cross-cultural interactions.
- Examine how cultural collisions can affect client-provider communication and impact HIV prevention services.
- List each of the steps in the LEARN model framework to improve cross-cultural communication in HIV prevention.
- Describe at least three steps to continue to develop knowledge, skills, and abilities in Cultural Competency and Cultural Humility.

Target Audience

This training is for all frontline staff—such as prevention counselors, navigators, and testers—who are implementing HIV prevention strategies and interventions are encouraged to attend.

Register for an upcoming training

See our training calendar for a list of upcoming trainings and registration information.